PREAMBLE

The formulation of this policy is a landmark in the commitment of JOOUST to prevent corruption within its boundaries and involving its stakeholders. This process involved the development of the JOOUST Code of Ethical Principles and Conduct 2013 for University Staff; establishment of the Corruption Prevention Committee and appointment of its members; training of JOOUST staff and sensitization of new students on corruption prevention; installation of Anti-Corruption boxes in the University and its Learning Centres; carrying out a corruption prevention survey by external consultants (which revealed insignificant levels of corruption across the departments) and ensuring that all Schools, Directorates, Departments and all functional units within the University submit annual corruption prevention plans and corruption prevention reports at the end of each quarter. This policy demonstrates the unwavering commitment of the University Management Board and the University community to prevent, fight (where it exists), monitor and report incidence of corruption to ensure and nurture positive and healthy ethical practices.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The Ethics and Anti-Corruption Commission for sensitization and guidance on drafting both code of conduct and ethics and the policy document; the University Management Board for steadfast support; Senate for comments and approval of the policy; and the University Corruption Prevention Committee for drafting the document and the entire University Community for cooperation.

Motto

3 The Core Values

This Policy is built upon a set of interrelated core values which, are embedded in beliefs and desired behaviors found within Jaramogi Oginga Odinga University of Science and Technology (JOOUST). They are the foundation for our task management and interpersonal relations. The Council, University Management Board and Stakeholders feel that the following core values represent the fundamental beliefs that influence the way JOOUST relates and deals with its customers and clients. The core values include:

Fairness

Strive to treat all its stakeholders with fairness and respect regardless of their culture, gender, creed, race, religion, ethnicity or any other affiliations.

Professionalism

Embrace professionalism as the fountain of its design and delivery of products and services with innovation and creativity as the hallmark.

Transparency and Accountability

Conduct its affairs with utmost transparency and accountability.

Integrity

Strive to be an inspiring institution, working to ensure and maintain stakeholders' confidence.

Meritocracy

Reward its employees and students on merit.

Gender Equity

Embrace gender equity and empowerment in its staff appointments, student admissions, and representation in decision-making organs.

Therefore, JOOUST being a service delivery institution with a mandate to improving the quality of life enjoyed by the community and her stakeholders recognizes that such transactions and activities can be prone to corruption. In this respect, JOOUST recognizes that corrupt practices can adversely affect its reputation, resources and its responsibility to the citizens of Kenya and all those who relate to the University. The policy supplements legal provisions and other government initiatives for fighting and preventing corruption in Kenya. The policy therefore seeks to provide a framework for efficient and effective detection, prevention and reporting of corrupt practices at the workplace and to educate staff on the woes of corruption.

4 Culture and Ethics

Ethics refers to a set of standards of what is right or wrong against which decisions are based. These are moral principles adopted by individual or groups to provide rules for right conduct. The ethical culture of an organization, that is, its shared understandings, values, beliefs, assumptions, attitudes and meanings, operate at a variety of levels, and are used by individuals or groups to make decisions, to justify these decisions and to evaluate outcomes.

In the context of this policy, integrity is examined at two levels. First it is seen at the personal level where integrity refers to the sum of positive qualities or virtues such as honesty, trustworthiness, goodness, loyalty, truthfulness, courage, impartiality, firmness, and steadfastness of principled behavior. Secondly, at the organization level where it refers to the legality, legitimacy, logic, rationality completeness, soundness and efficacy of objectives, programs, structures, systems, processes, procedures and codes.

The ethical standards of an organization's culture have an impact on staff in various ways, for example, in job satisfaction, commitment, stress and turnover. The nature of the organizational culture may either help or obstruct the implementation of policies and procedures. This is because the culture of the organization influences employees' behavior through enforcing already existing patterns, whether positive or negative; the employees' behavior through the standards that have been set, whether high or low; organizational strategies, integration of technologies, inter-group conflicts, communication, and socialization. It has ramification on the degree of analysis and understanding of organizational dynamics.

A combination of these factors will have either positive or negative influence on the overall performance of employees. Therefore, it is necessary for all JOOUST staff to know JOOUST organizational ethics and culture to minimize conflict of interest and to integrate them with the ethics proposed in this corruption prevention policy.

5 Why and How Corruption Occurs

Corruption occurs due to motives and opportunities that are found in judgment and in monopoly. It flourishes by allowing activities that are illegal, accepting payment to do something that should otherwise not be done and giving consideration to circumvent processes. Such are behaviours that workers are able to guard against by observing the institution's code of ethics.

6 Corruption Prevention

JOOUST will undertake to identify organisational features that allow corruption to occur. It involves strengthening systems of control in organizations through better management systems and closer supervision in each division to expose organisational weaknesses (loopholes) and improve procedures, practices and methods of doing work. It is our belief that by doing this it will minimise:

- i. Financial loss
- ii. Public embarrassment
- iii. Waste of time and other resources

The purpose of corruption risk assessment is to:

- i. Detect Corruption, dishonesty and unethical behavior in organization
- ii. Reduce the possibility of corruption incidence
- iii. Reduce the exposure of staff to corruption
- iv. Ensure that there is no hiding place for the corrupt and the dishonest
- v. Maintain best practices and procedures
